2020 Executive Learning Series

We understand these are times of uncertainty due to COVID-19, however, we strongly encourage diverse suppliers to apply for the CVS Health & Roger Williams University Executive Learning Series Program as CVS Health will continue to closely monitor the progression of COVID-19. With new updates and information being released daily, in the event we are unable to host the kick-off session onsite in Providence, Rhode Island, our team has developed contingency plans and is considering alternative hosting options including but not limited to virtual engagements.

CVS Health seeks applicants for the sixth Annual Executive Learning Series for Diverse Suppliers. Together, we can achieve and sustain breakthrough innovation to reinvent the diversity marketplace.

At CVS Health, pursuing diversity within our supply chain is critical to our mission of helping people on their path to better health. As a pharmacy innovation company, we rely on our suppliers to collaborate with our more than 250,000 colleagues across all 50 states, Puerto Rico and Brazil to solve cost, quality, and access issues in the evolving health care landscape.

Learn and grow with CVS Health Supplier Diversity and Roger Williams University College

CVS Health is committed to achieving supplier diversity while at the same time, understanding that doing business with large companies like CVS Health can be challenging. As such, CVS is continuing with our sixth Annual Executive Learning Series for Diverse Suppliers in partnership with the Center for Workforce & Professional Development at the Roger Williams University College.

Fifteen applicants will be selected for the Executive Learning Series, which will begin on June 11th, 2020. The program is completely funded by CVS Health and taught by the faculty of the Center for Workforce & Professional Development at the Roger Williams University College.

Experience the benefits of participating in the Executive Learning Series for Diverse Suppliers:

1. Selected leaders will become immersed in a curriculum that is designed to help expand their business capacity, professional skill level, and growth potential in critical areas ranging from marketing & finance to leadership, business innovation and social media.

2. Students will gain practical experience, including the opportunity to respond to a sample Request for Proposal (RFP) and be mentored by RWU Instructors as Executive Coaches. Students will also receive additional coaching from individuals part of the CVS Health Procurement Department.
